I have the following: model A has_one :model_b model B has_many :models_a How should I store the relationship? A: If A needs to have a relation to B I'd expect A to have an association to B in it's own class. class A belongs_to :model_b end If you really want A to have a direct link to B then add it to A directly. class A has_one :model_b end The same goes for B. class B has_many :models_a end class A belongs_to :model_b end class B has_many :models_a end Q: How to evaluate a numerical expression of an object? I want to be able to "eval()" a numerical expression. For example: >
